Salmon - It looks like everything is now straight in Chile and production is back to 100%. Prices will be down for next week. Canadian prices are still stable and Faroe and Scottish prices are dropping again.

Tuna - Prices are still down but will be up for next week as landings are starting to slow down.

Sword - The market jumped a little this week but prices are still very reasonable for the one-night fish we are getting from Florida.

Mahi - The market hit rock bottom on Monday so we have great prices for the weekend but we are already seeing higher prices for next week.

Halibut - Landings in Canada have slowed even more this week so prices continue to rise. There are more Norwegian fish on their way so these might stabilize the market for next week.

Rockfish - Big fish are still scarce and expensive. There are a few local 2-4# fish available at decent levels.

Lobsters - We have several openings coming up in Canada so this should drop the market even more. Frozen lobster items are still limited and expensive.

Crabmeat - Venezuelan prices dropped all week but we are hearing that production has come to a halt until they can correct the market. We will have great pricing thru next week at least. Producers in North Carolina are still picking a few days each week but this will not last much longer.

Wild Salmon - Our last shipment arrived yesterday and once these are gone it will be over until late spring next year.

Snappers - Still rolling on American Reds out of Mexico. Prices are down and we have plenty of fish from 6-12# whole.

Groupers - Production has been steady from Mexico to Brazil and the market remains stable.

Fluke - Big landings and increased quotas in Virginia have dropped prices to levels we have not seen for a while. We have plenty of fish in here from 1-2# available for the weekend.

Best Bets - Fluke, Tuna, Mahi, Mako and Wahoo.
